

GLOBAL - COFFEE NEWS - APRIL 2025

NEW YORK, April 3 (Reuters) - The first U.S. tariffs on coffee imports since colonial times will increase costs and complexity to importers and roasters already dealing with near-record prices.

The U.S. announced on Wednesday tariffs of 46% on imports from Vietnam, the world's second largest coffee producer, as well as a 32% duty on imports from Indonesia, the fourth largest grower. Central and South American coffee growers, such as Brazil and Colombia, got a 10% tariff.

The U.S. is also a major importer of processed cocoa products like butter and powder from the EU, Malaysia and Indonesia. Trump slapped 20% tariffs on EU imports and 24% on Malaysian goods, while the 32% tariffs on Indonesia of course apply to both robusta coffee and to cocoa products.

- Roasters reeling as raw bean prices double
- After 21% hike, Brazil's 3 Coracoes raises prices by 14% - document
- Supermarkets pushing back against hikes as shop shelves emptying